

Mazda CX-7 creates a stir at the Paris International Motor Show

The Mazda Motor Corporation showcased the Mazda CX-7, a crossover sport-utility vehicle (SUV), at the Paris International Motor Show held recently. Exclamations that 'Mazda has delivered' were heard over and over again. Designed with the distinction of a sports car and sports car like attitude; this innovation created a real stir at the show.

Accompanying the Mazda CX-7 were the all-new Mazda MX-5 Roadster Coupe, the all new Mazda BT-50 pickup and the winner of the Grand Prix Du Plus Beau Concept Car- the Mazda Senku. Mazda's new range met more than the expectations of onlookers.

Mazda's new CX-7 is the best looking and best performing crossover comes across as a stylish SUV having the soul of a Sports Car. It comes in three models; Sport, Touring and Grand Touring.

It's sleek, curved, muscular body is enhanced by well spaced, extended interiors fitted with modern features that include air conditioning, power windows/locks/mirrors, six airbags, antilock brakes, and dynamic stability control, with optionals like a DVD navigation system, 9-speaker BOSE stereo and a proximity key system; encompassing the driver's seat. It also possesses excellent handling, good power from a turbo charged 2.3 liter, and its fuel efficiency stretching to a high of 18/24 miles per gallon.

Where Safety is concerned; the CX-7 is truly advanced. It offers front side-impact airbags and side curtain airbags for front and rear passengers. Beginning from proprietary crash-impact structural safeguards to advanced safety belts and front and side airbag systems, the CX-7 is equipped with the latest in passenger safeguards. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration gave it a five-star rating front and side impact; which was its highest rating for front and side-impact tests as well as a four star rollover rating.
